

Hope for a Snow-Frosted Heart
Cara Carroll

A star gives glint in the distant night sky
As my feet sink in the silver-white snow
And a warm, crackling fire waits by and by
I, shivering, long for its glow

But the day is warm, the sun shines bright
While my lonely heart wanders in cold, longing night
And it searches for the one who is right
And craves those embers of sparkling light

You leave me so helpless, so helpless indeed
With my young, tender heart in your hand
You've ignited in me a strong aching need
Brought me to this strange, foreign land

So I trample the snow on the bleak, frozen ground
Ever keeping so close on your heels
While the snow in my heart meets the sun all around
Soon we'll see what this new day reveals
